History

The Adinatha Basadi is located in Chikkahanasoge in K.R.Nagar taluk, Mysuru district. This is a fine triple shrine temple in the Chalukyan style. In this temple, instead of the usual sukhanasi, each shrine has a 4-pillared navaranga opening into the front hall. The main cell has a 5' high seated figure of adinatha on a pedestal with a prabhavali. It is flanked by male Chauri-bearers, all of which are carved on one panel. The south cell contains a figure of Shantinatha, while the north cell bears a 3' high figure of Chandranatha. The elegantly carved doorways of the north shrine are the finest in the temple. The lintels on all the doorways are inscribed in Kannada script. Although the temple is in ruins, the images have not suffered mutilations.
