This trikuta temple faces west. It consists of three garbhagrahas with an antarala, a common sabhamandapa and a rangamandapa. Each of the three garbhagrahas contains a Sivalinga. The doorframes have dvarapala sculptures. In the lalatabimba is a tiny Gajalakshmi motif. The ceiling has a Padma motif. There are four freestanding pillars in the sabhamandapa. Inside the Rangamandapa are twelve freestanding pillars. There are three entrances to the Rangamandapa. There is a damaged Kakshasana around the Mukhamandapa. The three garbhagrahas have Kadambanagara or phamsana superstructure. In front of the western and eastern entrances are a Nandi mantapa and a Pushkarani. An inscription of the 15th century states of a gift of land to Siddharamayya for the worshipping of Goad Siddhayya.
