History

This east-facing temple comprises a garbhagraha, an antarala and a sabhamandapa. Originally it has three garbhagrahas. Now the garbhagrahas and the antaralas on the west and north have completely fallen. In the centre of the garbhagraha is a finely carved sculpture of Mahavishnu. The doorframe of the garbhagraha has five shakhas on each side with virabhadra, Rati and Kama, and female attendant holding Kalasha as dvarapalas. The lalatabimba contains a tiny Gajalakshmi bimba. There are four freestanding pillars in the sabhamandapa. There is a uma-maheshavara sculpture in the sabhamandapa. The doorframe in the south of the sabhamandapa is panchashakha. The temple has an adhisthana. The exterior of the temple is decorated with bhadra- salilantara. On stylistic grounds the temple belong to 9th ?10th century A. D.
