History

This east facing temple comprises a garbhagraha, antarala, sabhamandapa of early 12th century and a Mahamandapa of later date. In the garbhagraha is a Veeranarayana sculpture of Vijayanagara period. In the lalatabimba of the garbhagraha door frame is a tiny Gajalakshmi bimba. The antarala has Jalavatayanas. On either side of the antarala are dvarapalas, almost identical. They are known as Jaya and Vijaya. In the lalatabimbha of the sabhmandapa is a tiny Gajalakshmi bimba. The spacious hall was built during the Vijayanagara period. Inside the hall are four free standing pillars decorated with bas-reliefs. The superstructure of the temple is of Kadambanagara or Phamsana form. The temple is surrounded by a prakara wall. The temple has a main entrance on the east.
