History

The Yoganarasimha temple is located at Mudigere village in Hassan Taluk and District.

This is a homogenous structure consisting of a garbhagriha, a navaranga, a sukanasi and a porch with a prakars. The outer walls of the temple, relieved by thin right-angled pilasters, have been raised on a basement consisting of cornices. The straight and short eaves also have dentil mouldings. The tower in the form of a stepped pyramid with decorated cornices is surmounted at the top by a stone finial. The two front pillars of the porch are bell-shaped. The sukanasi doorway is flanked by perforated screens. The sukanasi ceiling is set in the shape of an octagon. The well carved doorway of the sanctum has a Gajalakshmi panel on the the lintel. Further the sanctum contains the gracefully seated 6' high image of Yoganarasimha on a pedestal, with garuda carved in front.
