History

The Lakshmiramana temple inside the Palace Fort, described as Nambinarayana of Chola times, is said to have existed before 1499 A.D. The Garbhagriha contains the 1 mt. high Vishnu image. The cell to the right has a seated image of Aravinda Lakshmi along with the figure of Venugopala. The temple has a enclosure wall, with a 5-storied Gopura Surmounted with 5 Kalasas. According to the Annals of the Mysore Royal Family, Dalvoy Nanjarajaya bribed the temple priest Srinivasaiah to poison the king. But the king had a miraculous escape. As such, he constructed both the mahadwara and the gopura as a mark of his devotion. This temple was also the venue for religious ceremonies held during the coronation of Krishna Raja Wodeyar III in 1799.
