History

This east-facing temple consists of a garbhagraha, an antarala and a sabhamandapa. Probably it had a mukhamandapa also. It was originally a Jaina temple and now is locally known as Narayana Devara gudi. The garbhagraha contains a Sivalinga. In the lalatabimba of the garbhagraha doorframe is a damaged tiny Jinabimba. There are four freestanding pillars in the sabhamandapa. Inside the sabhamandapa are four devakosthas. The parashva garbhagrhas have twenty-four Tirthankaras. The superstructure of the temple is of tritala vimana. On stylistic ground the temple may belong to 10th ? 11th century A. D.
