History

The fort rises over land and stretches over the hill, it consists of five encircling walls, and huge square stone blocks along with mortar have been used in its construction. The outermost fort has east orientation with large gate, two large gates and a entrance; here the fort stretches from north to south in the form of right angle, the gate way does not have any entrance porch in the interior, adjacent to this gate is a small entrance to the south. The fort walls are broad on top and its eastern side contains many square bastions.The organization / makeup of the second fortification is similar to that of the first, even here, with broad walls on top, square bastions and an arched gate way in the east. In the northern corner is a circular bastion. The gateway structure and its surrounding walls seem to be of later period from type of construction and a lot of mortar is used here. Next to the entrance is a platform on which stands a dome roofed, arched small hall bay (ankana), in the same vicinity is another small platform with a Hanuman idol. To the north of the gate is Neelammana temple and Eshwara temple and to the south is Basavanna and Gangadhara temples, these temples are of recent origin and simple in style.Opposite to the third fortification are two platforms having two muslim graves. The fortification consists of square bastion to the east gateway in between two bastion. On either side of the entrance is an arched ankana.The fourth fortification contains square and circular bastions, its east facing gateway is ruined.
