History

The hill fort of Raichur, which was of great importance in the past, is surrounded on three sides by a double row of massive but low circuit walls. The inner walls built of huge block of stone without the aid of any cementing material is the work of the Hindus and the outer walls built of comparatively rough stone masonry is the work of the Muslims. The outer fortifications contain five gates; the Meccai Darwaza on the west, the Naurangi Darwaza on the north, the Kati Darwaza on the east, the Khandak Darwaza on the north and Doddi Darwaza on the south-west. The Maccai Darwaza and the adjoining walls were, according to the persian inscriptions on the arches of the gateway, built by the commands of one Mallu Khan in 1470 A.D during the reign of the Bahamani king Muhammad Shah III. The modern road starting from the railway station and leading into the town passes through this gate way. Further to the south, near the fort of the hill, is the Doddi Darwaza, a double arched entrance, in the muslim wall. Near this gate way is a beautiful well-constructed of fine stone masonry with a long stair case leading right to the bottom. Generally the material used for the construction of these gateways has been taken from some ruined Hindu temples.
