History

There are six temples in and around the village, out of these, Markandeswara is the oldest one. Some black polished stone pillars of kalyana Chalukya style are seen in the hall of this temple. Another temple known as Marutishwara temple is also an old temple. An inscription at this temple records that one Singhanna set up the garuda pillar in front of this temple. And it also states that the village was an agrahara in those days. A number of inscriptions have been found in this village. Most of them belong to the period of Chalykyas of Kalyana. A wooden inscription, which now forms part of the ceiling of the chavadi building, states that the gateway (Raichur Darwaza) was constructed by Agha Khusru, a well-known Adil Shahi dignitary.
