History

The temple is in Indo-Islamic style. It consists of a garbhagraha and a mukhamandapa of later period. Originally the temple was a mosque. Later it was converted into a Siva temple by installing a Nandi in front of the garbhagraha. All the four corners of the Kapota portion has Nandi image. The garbhagraha walls have arch model projections. The superstructure of the temple is of dome type. On stylistic ground this temple resembles Islamic style. It has a prakara wall. Inside the prakara wall are many small rooms, which have arched facade.
